India@79; Celebrating the Spirit of Freedom

Every year on 15th August, our schools, colleges, and streets are filled with the colours of the Indian flag. We sing the national anthem, remember our freedom fighters, and proudly celebrate Independence Day. But after the celebrations end, one question quietly remains in my mind: Are we truly free?

In 1947, our freedom fighters gave us political freedom after years of sacrifice. They dreamed of an India where every citizen could live with dignity, equality, and hope. Today, we enjoy many of the freedoms they fought for. We can vote, speak our minds, and pursue our dreams. Yet, for many people, freedom is still a journey rather than a destination.

"At the stroke of the midnight hour, when the world sleeps, India will awake to life and freedom." These words by Jawaharlal Nehru still echo every Independence Day. Recently, social media was filled with videos of students standing together in protest. They were not asking for luxury or privilege... they were asking for better opportunities, fair treatment, and a stronger education system.

The determination on their faces reflected hope as much as frustration. Whether one agrees with every demand or not, these protests remind us that young people care deeply about the future of education and the future of our country.

The voice of protest was not limited to students. Environmentalist and education reform advocate Sonam Wangchuk also undertook a hunger strike to draw attention to the concerns of the people of Ladakh. His peaceful movement reminded the nation that democracy is strengthened when citizens express their concerns through non-violent means. His protest encouraged meaningful conversations about development, identity, and the responsibilities of those in power.

Education is one of the greatest forms of freedom. A student who cannot afford quality education, who worries about opportunities, or who feels unheard carries a burden that no national celebration alone can erase. Real independence means that every child, whether in a city or a remote village, has the chance to learn, dream, and build a better future. India has achieved remarkable progress since 1947. We have become a global force in science, technology, sports, and space exploration. Yet every generation must ask itself what kind of India it wants to build next. Freedom is not a destination reached once; it is a responsibility that must be renewed every day. As a student, I believe freedom is more than saluting the flag once a year. It is the freedom to ask questions without fear, to receive quality education regardless of one's background, and to dream without limitations. Our freedom fighters gifted us political independence. It is now our duty to ensure that every Indian also experiences freedom through opportunity, equality, and justice. So, this Independence Day, while we celebrate our glorious past, let us also reflect on our present and our future. Let us honour our freedom not only with patriotic songs but also by working towards an India where every voice is heard and every dream has a chance to grow. Because true freedom is not just inherited, it is built, protected, and shared.

The Pen of Freedom

Independence is more than a flag in the sky
It is the courage to dream, to question, to try
It lives in every voice that speaks the truth
And in the fearless hope of every youth

It was earned through sacrifice, tears and pain
By countless heroes who broke every chain
Their courage became the light we share
A promise of justice, freedom and care

As students, we carry a different role
To seek the truth with heart and soul
Freedom of speech is a priceless right
But it must be used to spread the light
Let facts be stronger than rumour or fear
And let every voice be heard loud and clear

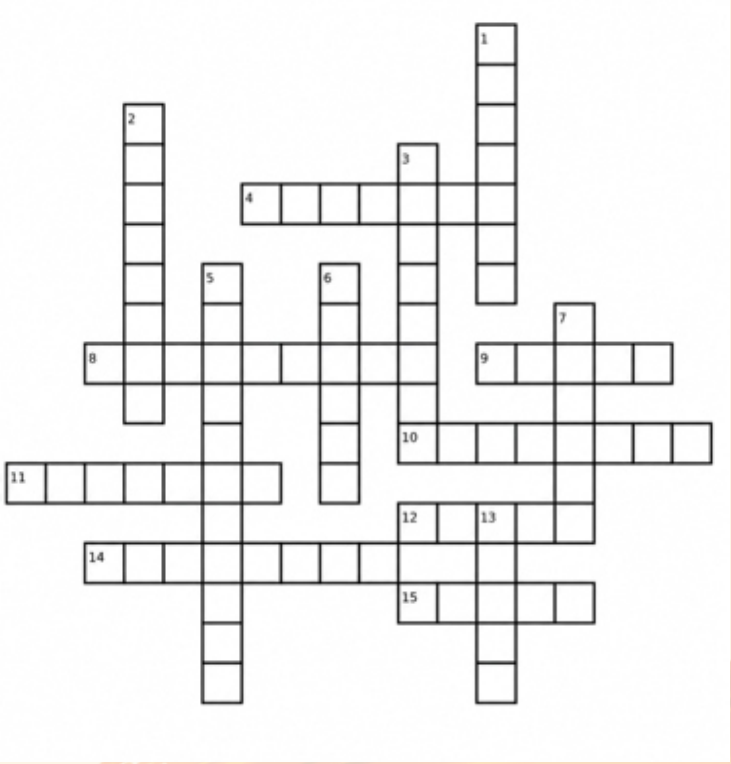

True independence is not only our past
It is a responsibility meant to last
Together with wisdom, unity and pride
We keep the spirit of freedom alive

Let India rise with every generation
Bound by hope, respect and determination
For the greatest tribute we can give today
Is to protect our freedom in every way.

Independence: A Freedom We Must Continue to Protect

Every year on 15th August, India proudly celebrates Independence Day. Our tricolour flies high, patriotic songs echo through schools and colleges, and we remember the countless freedom fighters who sacrificed everything so that future generations could live in a free nation. But Independence Day is not only a celebration of our past, it is also a reminder of our responsibility toward the future.

Political independence was achieved in 1947, but every generation faces its own challenges. Today, our battles are different. They are fought not only at our borders but also in the realm of ideas, information, and public discourse. Democracy gives every citizen the right to express opinions, question authority, and protest peacefully. At the same time, every citizen also carries the responsibility to respect the Constitution, maintain public order, and place the nation's well-being above personal or political interests. The recent protests have once again shown how strongly people feel about issues that affect the country. While many citizens participated peacefully to voice their concerns, the events also highlighted how easily misinformation, emotional narratives, and political agendas can influence public opinion. In the digital age, facts often compete with rumours, making it difficult to distinguish truth from propaganda.

Young people, especially students, are among the most active users of social media. This makes them powerful voices for change, but it also makes them vulnerable to manipulation. Anti-national narratives, extremist ideologies, and misleading content can spread rapidly online, often disguised as activism or patriotism. Equally, misinformation can come from many directions, regardless of ideology. Blindly accepting any narrative without verifying facts weakens the very democracy our freedom fighters fought to establish. True patriotism does not demand silence, nor does it encourage hatred. It demands awareness, critical thinking, and informed participation. A responsible citizen questions with evidence, debates with respect, and acts with integrity. Before forwarding a message, sharing a video, or joining a movement, we must ask: Is this true? Is it verified? Does it strengthen the nation or divide it?

As students, we have a unique role in shaping India's future. Our classrooms should teach us not only to earn degrees but also to develop wisdom, empathy, and constitutional values. The strongest defence of our nation is not only its armed forces but also its informed, responsible, and united citizens. This Independence Day, let us honour our freedom fighters not merely by saluting the flag but by protecting the ideals for which they sacrificed their lives. Freedom is not a gift that remains secure forever, it is a responsibility that every generation must preserve through truth, unity, and vigilance.

A Nation with billion dreams - India

India is not merely a nation; it is a land of dreams, diversity, ambitions and possibilities. India is home to over a billion people who all have dreams, aspirations and visions for a better life, a better society and a better country. Whether it is the farmer who toils under the scorching sun or the farmer who gazes at the stars, every Indian carries the dream of building a modern and prosperous India

The dreams of this nation's people go beyond materialistic wealth. Today's youth wants world-class education, jobs, equity and opportunities to make the most of their potential. The aspirations of India's youth are colossal considering that this country hosts one of the world's largest young populations. These ambitions will propel India to greater heights and enable it to achieve national prominence. India's youth are the epitome of innovation, entrepreneurship, leadership, research, sports, creativity and excellence. Great nations are not born solely on the back of their ambitions but also through their actions. Unfortunately, there is still much to be done if India has to realize its national aspirations. Poverty, unemployment, inequality, environmental degradation, corruption, and lack of access to quality education and health care are some of the challenges that India faces today. Progress in economic development is not enough for a nation such as India; it must ensure that the fruits of growth are shared among all its people, including those living in its remote areas and vulnerable groups.

India will achieve its dreams if only Indians embrace accountability, integrity, and inclusiveness. Every citizen must take responsibility for nation-building by rejecting corruption and nepotism. In addition to holding public officials accountable for the use of public funds, ordinary citizens must be responsible by desisting from engaging in corrupt activities and other vices that hinder national development. Indians must reject narrow-mindedness and promote unity and tolerance of diverse opinions, cultures, and social customs. After all, national development will be realized only through the collective efforts of all citizens.

Independence Day

Independence Day is one of the most important national festivals of India. We celebrate it every year on 15th August to remember the day India gained independence from British rule in 1947. This day reminds us of the struggles and sacrifices made by our freedom fighters to give us a free nation. Many great leaders, including Mahatma Gandhi, Jawaharlal Nehru, Subhas Chandra Bose, Bhagat Singh, and Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel, played important roles in India's freedom struggle. Their courage, determination, and love for the country continue to inspire us.

On Independence Day, the national flag is hoisted in schools, colleges, government. The national anthem is sung, and students participate in speeches, cultural programs, patriotic songs, and competitions. The Prime Minister also hoists the national flag at the Red Fort in New Delhi and addresses the nation. Independence Day is not only a celebration of freedom but also a reminder of our responsibilities as citizens.

We should respect our country, follow the law, protect the environment, and treat everyone with equality and kindness. We must work together to build a peaceful, united, strong, and developed India. Independence Day fills every Indian with pride and patriotism. It teaches us that freedom comes with responsibility

80 YEARS OF FREEDOM: ARE WE WORTHY OF IT?

India is 80 years free.

Eighty years since freedom became something we inherited rather than something we had to fight for. Eighty years since people sacrificed so that we could speak, question, disagree and choose. But perhaps that is exactly where we should pause. What have we done with that freedom? We celebrate independence every year. We raise the flag, sing the songs and call ourselves proud Indians. But how often do we stop and ask what freedom actually demands from us? Freedom gives us the right to speak. But do we listen?It gives us the right to question. But do we question everything, or only what we already disagree with? It gives us the freedom to disagree. But can we disagree without turning the other person into an enemy? Somewhere along the way, disagreement has started becoming personal. A different opinion can become an insult. A question can become an accusation. Criticism can become ha-tred and perhaps the problem is not only with those in power.Perhaps it is also with us. We live in a time where information reaches us faster than ever. But are we becoming more informed, or simply more certain? Do we check before we believe? Do we think before we share? Do we ever ask ourselves whether we might be wrong? Because freedom without responsibility can become something very different from what was intended. Democracy is not simply about choosing who leads us.

First Day, First Impressions: The BA 1st sem Journalism Experience

As i was a lost first-year, searching for my classes, when my childhood friend who studies here, guided me around. The classes were so much fun. I made a lot of friends and talked to many new people. For the first time of living in Mysore, I finally felt like myself again. After classes, my new friends and I created a group and since then, it has been filled with wonderful memories. There have been ups and downs along the way. I even had to cut my hair, which felt like losing a part of myself, and I went hungry for two days. But it's okay, I know I'll move on. The classes are enjoyable and they make me want to participate, get involved, and not worry about being embarrassed because I have friends who will laugh along with me. Fingers crossed, and touch wood, I hope our group continues to have fun while learning and making many more unforgettable memories together.

The Beginning of college was a mix of excitement and nervousness. I was worried about meeting new people and entering a completely new environment, but the campus looks beautiful and full of greenery.On the first day, the teachers welcomed us warmly, introduced themselves, explained about the college and went over the rules we need to follow. Afterwards, we spent some time searching for our classrooms and getting a bit confused along the way.One of the most interesting part of the day was visiting the Journalism studio. Sir explained the setup of the entire studio and they even showed us an animal documentary. I'm so excited about the classes ahead! By the end of the day, I made new friends and, it was a wonderful day.

"THE HARDER YOU WORK TODAY, THE PROUDER YOU'LL BE TOMORROW"

A New Chapter was like any other day very normal, very boring, and very tiring. We started with CrFS. The first teacher who came was very polite and sweet, but then an other teacher came in and straight up started telling us the rules and how discipline was something she wouldn't compromise on. Trying to live up to that strict plan for discipline, I survived until the class ended!Next, It was Psychology, we searched all over for the classroom because we were practically clueless, but we eventually found the lab. We met all the teachers for this class, and thankfully, they weren't scary at all everyone was friendly and looked helpful. After that, we had Journalism the class I was most excited for. When we entered, the teacher told us to introduce ourselves. When I did, she asked a question no other teacher had asked: what subject interested me the most? It was obviously Journalism. The teacher reacted with, "Finally someone is interested in this field!" I was a bit clueless at first, but I felt very welcomed. Later, we went to the canteen, met my cousins and ate food. Finally, we had English. The teacher was really good I mean, really good. Every teacher I met on the first day left a mark and gave me the certainty that they won't let us down and will educate us in the most effective way. Overall, it was a very productive and fun day.

Starting at college was a memorable experience. I felt both excited and a little nervous because everything was new to me. When I entered the campus, I saw many new students and teachers. The college building was large and beautiful. At first, I felt a little shy, but soon I started talking to a few classmates. Everyone was introducing themselves and beautiful. At first, I felt a little shy, but soon I started talking to a few classmates. Everyone was introducing themselves and trying to make new friends. Our teachers welcomed us warmly and explained the college rules, timetable, and subjects. They encouraged us to study well and participate in different activities. I attended my first classes and learned about the course structure. By the end of the day, I felt much more comfortable and confident. My first day at college was truly a special and unforgettable experience.

"THE HARDER YOU WORK TODAY, THE PROUDER YOU'LL BE TOMORROW"

A new phase of college was so wonderful! I hadn't expected much, but after Deeksharambh, Sociology ma'am (Dr.Sowmya) took all of us on a tour to introduce us to the college. It was so beautiful, with trees all around, cloudy and foggy weather, water sprinkling from the Ashoka trees, and beautiful campus trees. A cool breeze blew, making my mood fresh and clearing away all my confusion about classes. The first guy I met was Malakrupagowda, and then Guru Kiran both were so friendly and nice. After that, when regular college classes started on Thursday, my first classes were with Bhavitha ma'am, then Vidya ma'am, and others. I was especially touched by Dr. Yamuna ma'am of Journalism, who was so kind to me. Later, I met my classmates like Shreya, Smitha, Vedika, Sathya, Zipporha and others. I didn't think I would build friendships so fast, they are all too good, and I hope our friendship continues just like this. Overall, my first day's experience was much better than I expected. I think I have chosen the correct college and course, and I hope everything continues to be great!

The first step at St. Philomena's College was a memorable experience. At first, I felt a little nervous and uneasy because everything was new to me. I was excited to start my college journey, but I was also a bit shy about meeting new people.As the day went on, I began to appreciate the beautiful college campus and the friendly atmosphere. Initially, it was a little difficult to talk to my classmates, but after some time, we started interacting and became good friends. I was so happy to find a caring and supportive friend circle. I also liked the teaching methods of the professors. They explained the subjects clearly and made the classes interesting. By the end of the day, I felt comfortable and realized that I had adjusted well to the new environment. My first day at St. Philomena's College was a wonderful experience that I will always remember.

"DON'T STOP WHEN YOU'RE TIRED . STOP WHEN YOU'RE PROUD."

I had zero clue about where my classes were and was just wandering around trying to find the rooms. Luckily, a senior came to the rescue and showed me around. I also happened to meet a stranger from my same class right at the beginning of the day. CrFS was my first class, where we got to know each other a bit better, and overall, it went pretty well. Later on, I met a sweet girl from Bangalore, and then two other lovely girls.

-Zipporha.H, I year, BA

Starting at college gave me a lot of wonderful experiences. I attended my first class in Criminology and Forensic Science, where I met many new friends. I really love the college ecosystem, and I am excited to meet even more friends and experience this environment. At first, I did not fully understand the importance of the subjects I had chosen. However, after attending a few classes and discussing them with the teachers, I began to understand their value. I want to say that the teachers are very friendly and open to discussing concepts with students. The teachers, staff, and workers are all very approachable, checking in to see if students are facing any problems and helping to solve them. At the end of the day, I am happy to say that I found very comfortable friends, teachers, and staff.

The beginning at St. Philomena's Degree College was exciting and memorable. I joined the Criminology, Psychology, and Journalism course with great enthusiasm. At first, I felt a little nervous, but the friendly atmosphere quickly made me comfortable. The teachers welcomed us and explained the timetable and our subjects. I met many new classmates and made a few friends. I was especially excited to learn about crime, human behavior, and journalism. The campus was beautiful, and I enjoyed exploring the classrooms and the library. By the end of the day, I felt happy, confident, and proud to be a student at St. Philomena's Degree College. It was a wonderful beginning to my college journey.

-Smitha H.S, I year, BA

Welcomed at college was a wonderful experience. I really loved the greenery on our campus, which made the environment feel fresh and peaceful. Everything was still new to us, we're taking some time to adjust to the classrooms and this new chapter of environment. What made the day even better was, how friendly and supportive all the teachers were. They made us feel comfortable and welcomed from the very beginning.

Overall, it was a great start, and I'm excited to learn, grow, and create beautiful memories in the days ahead.

As soon as I entered the campus, I fell in love with the environment, it was huge and historical. I headed into the classroom and sat next to my friend. My first class was CrFS, and it was interesting learning about new things. After that, I had a Psychology class, and the teachers were so friendly. I walked in with a mix of excitement, nervousness, and a lot of questions about what the coming years would be like. The unfamiliar classrooms, new faces, and different environment felt strange at first, but there was also something beautiful about starting fresh

Later, my friend and I went and had some coffee together. It was peaceful yet exciting.
