CELEBRATING HAPPINESS HAPPENS MONTH

The Society of Happy People in 1998 celebrated August 8 as Happiness day. Happiness Happens Month in the month of August in 1999. The Happiness

It was started as a way to express genuine happiness and look for it in an individual's everyday life. The society then came to the realization that the feeling of happiness had to be extended which eventually led to the first celebration of World Happens Month is a significant month not because it means we must be happy all the time, but it pushes us to realize that Happiness happens to everyone. No one is devoid of happiness if we just let ourselves experience it. In this time we have conditioned ourselves to smile at others and that sometimes leaves us empty. So this Happiness Happens Month, allow yourself to feel all emotions. Happiness does not have to always make you hyper positive, you have to first accept that you can experience the worst situations and yet remain strong knowing you are capable of moving past the hurdle. Just like T. Harv Eker said "If you want to make a permanent change, stop focusing on the size of your problems and start focusing on the size of you."

August 19 World Photography Day

World Photography Day is an annual celebration observed on August 19th. This day is dedicated to the art, science, and history of photography. It commemorates the invention of the daguerreotype, a photographic process developed by Louis Daguerre and announced by the French Academy of Sciences in 1839.World Photography Day serves as a platform for photographers, both amateur and professional, to showcase their work, share their passion for photography, and connect with a global community of photography enthusiasts. It's a day to appreciate the impact of photography on our lives, from preserving memories to documenting history and conveying emotions through images.People around the world celebrate this day by participating in photography contests, exhibitions, workshops, and photo walks. Social media platforms also play a significant role in bringing photographers together to share their work and engage in discussions about photography techniques, equipment, and the power of visual storytelling.Whether you're a seasoned photographer or someone who simply enjoys taking snapshots with a smartphone, World Photography Day encourages you to explore the world through the lens and appreciate the beauty, diversity, and storytelling potential that photography offers. It's a day to capture moments, freeze time, and leave a lasting visual legacy. - Amrutha A

Depression - A Story of Unknown Moments

Do you ever feel your emotions physically? It might be a pit in your stomach or a tension in your back. It calls out to you, like a siren blaring, "Something is wrong". A year or so ago, I had this pit in my stomach that would not go away. It felt like a sustained, subtle panic attack that lasted several days perhaps even a week. I couldn't understand what it was telling me.

To run? To stay? Which thoughts should I follow? Which were trying to be helpful and which were feeding this feeling in my stomach? I tried many of my usual coping skills to make it go away running, meditating, hanging out with friends, talking it out. Nothing was working which indicated that it was something deeper. My whole life I found myself never truly understanding why I had so many different identities I have been so many different people in the past based on what I believe to be me at the time or whom I am around or what they want me to do be. The lies I tell, the inability to hold down a relationship due to being so defensive and dwelling on mistakes or criticism even when it's something so small. I am only 19 years old, but it feels like as though I am much older. I had struggled with mental illness from the minority of my life, I have spent most of my teenage days by feeling tired, alone, depressed and unstable ... I would just blind myself with the hope odd better days in my future to come... My journey with mental health has not been easy one.

I was suffering from depression and anxiety in 2019. I feel like I have lost a certain amount of my life during those years for various reasons!! I was constantly having panic attacks at bright times which prevented me from sleeping!! After few days I broke open, and streams of depression, fear, panic, obsessive love and anger flowed out. In response to a panic attack that lasted for a week!! Migraine headaches started then and increasingly intense anxiety about school. I missed many days, felt shame as if I were faking, and obsessed over every one of my failings. I spent long hours alone in my room through my teenage years, depression went underground. Feelings were dangerous. There were too many angry and violent ones shaking the house for me to add to them. So I kept emotion under wraps, even more so than in childhood. Nothing phased me outside the house and even at home I showed almost no sign of reaction to anything!Gradually, depression became so disruptive that I couldn't take it anymore!! Depression is a mood disorder that makes you feel constant sadness or lack of interest in life; anxiety for me came out of nowhere and hit me like a ton of bricks. It just started with lack of self love constantly sweaty palms and an elevated heart rate. I couldn't feel anything anymore. Nothing used to seem good to me in fact I started throwing up in the mornings at the thought of going to school. All I wanted to do was Cary and scream and let it all out because it was killing me outside. If I had told people how many times I've sat alone on the shower floor crying, I'd promise they'd cry too!! But I don't think people understand how stressful it is to explain what's going on in your head when you don't even understand it yourself!!! And then after few days Panic attacks started, for me everything seem centered around my heart and mind. My heart would beat super fast without any trigger and that alone would scare me into a nasty crying!! I still remember my untidy nights! My anxiety got worse day by day. I was terrified for any other Panic attacks!!My family was whispering about my eating disorders. A recovery story is a messy thing!! Most of the conflict and drama is internal and there's lot more inactions than action. The lead character hides in the shadows much of the Times you can't even see what's going on!!It was my worst kind of sadness that I was not able to explain people why??

One fine day I sat and spoke to myself, why should I feel so numb when I've got such good environment and parents too!! This was the time when I started building confidence within me, anxiety is not a disease it's just a mood disorder that makes you feel constantly sad and lack of interest in living! Depression isn't weakness living with depression Turing up and doing stuff with anxiety takes a strength most will never do!!

I just wanted a day where it feels like "am not falling a nymore" and that day is here!!

Hey it's all ok if you struggle to stay positive, it's ok if your work is in progress, if you miss your old self, if you fear your own potential, if you color outside the line, if you feel exhausted today, if you haven't let it go yet, if you are over thinking it, if you wonder why you're you, if you rush through memories and thoughts and if you feel lost and confused!! It's okay, it takes time to overcome and heal its all okay. Now I have the power to control my thoughts and emotions and getting strong every day.

I know you can deal all the hurdles, Take a deep breath start loving yourself start focusing on yourself everyone will be alright!! This was just a chapter of my life not a whole story so I know I can bring the best out of me!!

CHANDRAYAAN-3 INDIAN SPACE RESEARCH AT ITS FINEST

Chandrayaan-3 carries profound significance for both India and the global scientific community. A triumphant landing in the Moon's south polar region promises essential insights into the lunar surface, its geological history, and potential resources like water ice. These discoveries could have far-reaching implications for future lunar colonization and space exploration endeavors.It succeeds the Chandrayaan-2 mission, which gained global attention due to its ambitious mission to explore the Moon's south polar region. Regrettably, during its descent, Chandrayaan-2's lander, Vikram, experienced a loss of communication and crash-landed on the lunar surface. Despite this setback, the orbiter continued transmitting valuable data to Earth, ensuring the mission's partial success. The primary objective is to fulfill the original mission's goal: achieving a successful soft landing on the Moon. To accomplish this, the Indian Space Research Organisation (ISRO) intends to develop a new lander and rover, incorporating advanced technology and incorporating lessons learned from the Chandrayaan-2 mission to increase the chances of a successful landing. Chandrayaan-3 exemplifies India's steadfast commitment to lunar exploration. By prioritizing a successful soft landing, this mission is poised to significantly enhance our understanding of the Moon and lay the groundwork for future lunar exploration missions. As ISRO continues to refine its technological prowess and build upon prior experiences, the world eagerly anticipates the forthcoming chapters in India's space odyssey.
